

INTRO

Client/server systems operate in networked environments, splitting the processing of an application between a front-end client and a back-end processor.

- Generally, the client process/front end? requires some resources (or services/data?) that the server (through the backend?) provides to the client.
- Clients and servers can reside on the same computer, or they can be on different computers that are networked together.